Dr. Winikus   Time Series Project Reflection

      As someone with a decent amount of machine learning experience already, this project was fairly in my wheelhouse. The hardest part of the project was simply wrangling all of the different parts of the project in my head. But once that was accomplished each step was fairly easy to go out and execute, albeit some parts being extremely time consuming. There was nothing that required brilliant strokes of coding which is good for a project that's meant to make sure of comprehension of concepts. One potential improvement would be to simply clear some of the prompts in the assignment paper itself. While I understand its meant to be fuzzy to represent real world circumstances, Its easy to feel like you might be going down a wrong path with so little direction, and I feel the real world will at least give a few more constraints. However, I could definitely be wrong about this and just overly accustomed to the concrete memorization college has gotten me accustomed to.
